Released by the alien race who try to keep themselves hidden from humans, the Galactic Federation of United Planets knows this planet. It is a place of peace. A place of harmony. And a place where strength and great power can. Sega has confirmed a release date for their latest game, Sonic Generations, and this news has been brought to us by none other than the development team themselves. Today we have some more information and a new trailer. This is a big news for Sonic fans. The game was first announced in May 2012. The game is developed by Sumo Digital and Sonic Team in collaboration with Christian Whitehead. Christian Whitehead and his team are also working on the new character game "WipEout HD." Gameplay Let's start with the gameplay. The gameplay is very interesting to say the least. So lets take a look. The first thing to note is that the title screen and the intro will be performed in motion capture. This means that every single move that Sonic and his friends will make will be performed by an actor. This means that the game will be more like a fast paced cartoon and the combat will be dynamic and fun. The most important thing to remember about Sonic Generations is the fact that you will be able to play as all the previously existing Sonic characters and all of the characters that will be revealed in the future. The character that you will be able to play as most of the time is Sonic. The trailer shows Sonic with the “Sonic Boom”. You will also be able to play as Sonic’s partner, Tails. You will also be able to play as Sonic’s mentor, Robotnik. Each of them will have their own gameplay style. Sonic will have the flying ability and a light attack. Tails will be able to fly and have a dark attack. Robotnik will have the best air and ground attacks. Rouge the Bat and Big the Cat will have their own gameplay. As you can see, the gameplay will be much faster and action packed. Story The game starts off with a video game which is titled “Super Smash Bros. Brawl.” In this video game, Sonic and a group of friends are fighting against Robotnik and his robotic army. After that, Sonic gets separated from Tails, Big
